Despite what Sharon Irish thinks, Katrina has yet to legally require prescription glasses. These spectacles serve solely for her 'academic performance identity' and she will stubbornly continue to rely on "Ctrl + ++++" for reading online.

These are the books Katrina was to have 'read' ages ago. She failed, again, to open them today. They are too large to fit in her backpack. (Accessory not pictured here).

Here's the purse with Pan-African colors that proves Katrina is cultured, Afro-centric and 'down for the cause.'

This is Katrina's lunch tote. Inside you will find a highly nutritious meal candidate for saddesknlunch.com. This edition's contents include beef, bok choy, rice and an apple.

Katrina keeps her hands ungloved anytime it's 20 degrees Farenheit or above. This way she can text, turn pages in books and show the bus driver her i.d!

Katrina purchased these shoes one year ago. They are totally inappropriate for the current weather conditions but she enjoys how their flair, paired with the prescription-less glasses, has invited her into the hipster community.
